VOLUME 27, NUMBER 5

February 4, 2016

The Longsuffering of God

According to a traditional Hebrew story, Abraham was sitting outside his tent one evening when he saw an old man, wearied from age and travel, coming toward him. Abraham rushed out, greeted him, and then invited him into his tent. There he washed the old man's feet and gave him food to drink. The old man immediately began eating without saying a blessing, so Abraham asked him, "Don't you worship God?" The old traveler replied, "I worship fire only and reverence no other god."

When Abraham heard this, he became incensed, grabbed the old man by the shoulders, and threw him out of his tent into the cold night air. When the old man had departed, God called to Abraham and asked where the stranger was. Abraham replied, "I forced him out because he did not worship you." God answered, "I have suffered him these eighty years although he dishonors me. Could you not endure him one night?"

Though you will not find this story in your Bible, it does reveal a truth about God's nature that we should not overlook. In several places in the Old Testament, God is said to be "longsuffering" or "slow to anger" (Exod. 34:6; Num. 14:18; Ps. 86:15; Joel 2:13). Now, why is this slow-to-anger quality of God so important? Well, imagine for a moment if God were not longsuffering. What would be the result? God's wrath would consume every person at the first sight of his/her sin or rebellion. Furthermore, it is doubtful that any long-term plan to redeem humanity would have been possible.

However, since God is longsuffering, everybody has an opportunity to escape destruction. This is made especially clear in 2 Peter 3:9: "The Lord is not slow to fulfill his promise as some count slowness, but is patient toward you, not wishing that any should perish, but that all should reach repentance" (cf. 1 Tim. 2:4). The "promise" in view here is the return of Jesus (vs. 4). One reason Jesus has yet to return is because God is holding out for as many people to be saved as possible. In fact, Peter goes on to say that we should "count the patience of our Lord as salvation" (vs. 15; cf. Rom. 2:4). Of course, we must not conclude that God's longsuffering or patience will never end. After all, the patience He exercised with those people living prior to the flood was eventually exhausted (1 Pet. 3:20; Gen. 6—9), and the return of Jesus, promised throughout the New Testament, is not a matter of if, but when.

THANK YOU

Thank you so much for the use of the fellowship hall after the service for Charles last Sunday. It was a perfect place to gather for food – all so clean and nice. We appreciate Susie offering it to us. There were about 150 people who gathered to eat with us. Thanks,
The Headrick and Sanchez families

Thanks to each and every one for all the time and effort in helping Hunter and our family. May the Lord bless you all each and every day. Thanks so much. Sincerely,
Kimberly Rose, Yulonda Rose family

If you would like me to send you a link to sign up online, call, text, or email me. I will need the names of each individual that is planning to be there. Sign up by February 28th! This is going to be a great weekend that you do NOT want to miss! Plan on it!

Closing it out:

The words of James, in 1:19, encourage us to be slow to anger, among other things. At times, perhaps most times, that can be difficult! Some of us may feel on occasion that this is a show of weakness. As it has often been said before, though, the ability to harness our anger truly is a great show of strength!

God Himself is described as being slow to anger in Nahum 1:3, and I find it interesting that in the same breath the prophet says that God is also great in power. In a context describing the jealousy, vengeance, and wrath of our God, Nahum clearly states that His anger is not like that of ours. God is not a hot-tempered oppressor. Rather, He is a longsuffering redeemer set on rescuing those that submit to Him. God certainly does reserve judgment for those that are in opposition to Him, yet He is patient with us. While so many times we deserve His wrath, what we get is His mercy. This character trait of God is one that many of us would do well to put forth effort to improve in ourselves!

Until next time...Jeremy
