VOLUME 27, NUMBER 15

What Faith is Not

It is often helpful to discuss what something is not in order to clarify our thinking about what something is. From a careful study of John's Gospel, our understanding of faith can be enriched by considering the following four things that faith is not. For rhetorical effect, I have deliberately chosen to use a figure of speech known as "litotes," i.e. an ironical understatement in which an affirmative is expressed by the negative of its contrary.

Faith is not indefensible. The stated purpose of John's Gospel is to engender faith in Jesus Christ (John 20:30-31). John's means of encouraging such faith among people was selecting and recording certain "signs." In other words, the "signs" that John recorded were intended to serve as the basis or grounds for a person's faith in Jesus. John did not expect people to believe in Jesus without any reason for doing so. Upon coming to faith in Jesus, people could likewise point to the "signs" as a way of defending their faith in Jesus. Faith is not a blind leap into the dark (cf. Heb. 11:1).

Faith is not invariable. In John 2:23-24, John makes an interesting observation: "Now when [Jesus] was in Jerusalem at the Passover Feast, many believed in his name when they saw the signs that he was doing. But Jesus on his part did not entrust himself to them, because he knew all people." In other words, the people believed in Jesus, but Jesus did not believe in them. Why? Evidently, the people possessed a superficial faith. While their faith was better than no faith at all, it fell short of what Jesus desired. John's observation forces us to view faith as something that exists along a continuum between shallow and deep.

Faith is not insubordinate. Though a translational issue does exist in John 3:36 (see NKJV), the ESV arguably reflects the better rendering: "Whoever believes in the Son has eternal life; whoever does not obey the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God remains on him." Faith and obedience belong together. To believe in Jesus is to obey Jesus; to obey Jesus is to believe in Jesus. To be disobedient is to be unbelieving so as to incur the wrath of God. John's Gospel destroys the notion that faith is exclusively cognitive (cf. John 12:44-50).

Faith is not indestructible. In John 6:66, we read, "After this many of his disciples turned back and no longer walked in him." While we may question the level of faith that these "disciples" had, the fact remains that they abandoned whatever measure of faith they did have. The same could be said of the Jews in John 8. They went from believing in Jesus (vs. 31) to picking up stones to throw at Jesus (vs. 59). According to John's Gospel, faith can regress and even die.

How might the foregoing thoughts about faith or believing in Jesus inform one's interpretation of John 3:16?

THANK YOU

Thanks to all for all the support, help, and, most of all, the prayers. Kim Rose

Thank you to all my brothers and sisters at Pulaski Street for being with me when I need you. You all are wonderful people, and I love each one of you. May God bless you in every way. Just don't forget our Father above who looks after us every minute of the day and night. Thanks again for each of you. Angelena Stewart

To the Elders,

I want to thank you for the prayers and concerns that you manifested toward me when I was ill for several months. Besides those prayers, I really felt supported for the time that I was allowed to minister to the church and those in the community. I think I am well now. I have been able to return to doing the things that I was used to doing in my life. I am not going to return to counseling. I feel it is time to retire from those endeavors. Again, thank you for your overall kind consideration for me and my family, and may God continue to bless your work and Pulaski Street. In God's love, David W. Amonette, MSW, LCSW

Closing it out:

I really enjoy leading the Pew Packers class here at Pulaski Street! There are some evenings when the kids get so into their singing that it leaves me in an unquenchable good mood for days! I love to see their smiles. I love to hear their voices. I love to see them light up when we start singing their favorite songs. It is just a really good thing!

Perhaps one of the hardest songs for them to master (because of the hand motions associated with it) is the one that goes like this: "I'm all wrapped up, I'm all tied up, I'm all tangled up in Jesus...". Little ones with developing motor skills sometimes struggle getting all the motions right and in the right order. Let's just be honest; some of us with fully developed motor skills struggle with it, especially since the song speeds up as it is repeated!

It is a fun song to sing, though, with a fantastic sentiment. That sentiment is perhaps what makes it the hardest song for us to live out as maturing Christians. It can be easy to get wrapped up in the schedules that we have. At times, we can't avoid being tied up in meetings or classes. The struggles and temptations that we face can certainly get us tangled up. But this song states that those adjectives apply to our walk with God the Father, and God the Son. At the point that I really consider the message of this song, a provoking question comes to my mind (and hopefully we will all ask this of ourselves): Am I more wrapped up, tied up, and tangled up with my faith, or with the peripherals of life?

"Seek first the Kingdom..." – Matthew 6:33

Until next time...Jeremy
