Remember God's Faithfulness

The story is told of a prospector in the last century who had to make a four-day journey across a burning desert. He couldn't carry enough water to make the journey without dying of thirst, but he was assured there was a well halfway across the desert. So he set out, and sure enough, there was a well right where the map indicated, but when he pumped the handle, the well only burped up sand. Then he saw this sign: "Buried two feet over and two feet down is a jug of water. Dig it up and use the water to prime the pump. Drink all the water you want, but when you are done, fill the jug again for the next person."

Well, he uncovered a jug of water two feet over and two feet down. At this point, the prospector had a decision to make: (1) use the water to prime the pump or (2) use the water to complete his journey. What would you do in this situation?

To tell you the truth, if I were in this prospector's predicament, I would be tempted to play it safe rather than run the risk. I would probably drink the water that had been buried! I don't know who wrote the sign on that rusty old pump. It could be a cruel joke. I'd pour that water down a worthless well only to watch my life drain away for lack of water.

Living a life of faith does involve an element of risk, but there is one factor in our story about the prospector that doesn't exist when it comes to God. I know who wrote the "sign" (2 Tim. 3:16-17; 2 Pet. 1:19-21), and He who wrote the sign can be trusted (Titus 1:1-2). The One who wrote the sign is faithful (Heb. 10:23). The One who wrote the sign does not make promises that he cannot keep (Heb. 6:13-20).

Now, at this very moment, you may very well be facing a difficult decision or a window of opportunity has presented itself to you—one that involves an element of risk. You've prayed about it. You've consulted God's Word. You've talked about it with others. You have your reservations and fears, but you are convinced of what God would have you to do. Of all the counsel I could give you at this point, the best is as follows: Remember God's faithfulness.

Throughout your life and mine, God sets before us windows of opportunity to exercise faith in the areas of our families, finances, careers, relationships, and more. When we do exercise our faith, we get a glimpse of what faith in a faithful God really looks like. The character that God has demonstrated in the past is true for the future because God never changes. Indeed, recalling God's great faithfulness in the past empowers us to trust him for still greater things in the future.
