The Beauty of Baptism

Following the lead of Ulrich Zwingli, a leader of the Reformation in Switzerland in the early 1500s, most evangelical theologians today view baptism as “an outward sign of an inward grace.” More specifically, according to this view, baptism is “a subsequent outward sign of a previously given inward grace” (Jack Cottrell, The Faith Once for All 362). In other words, baptism is viewed as an act of obedience on the part of a Christian, not a sinner, for the purposes of symbolically demonstrating in an outward expression something that has already been accomplished inwardly in terms of salvation in the life of an individual. Thus, for most evangelicals, the theological significance of baptism is limited exclusively to its symbolism.

Romans 6:1-6 is often used in support of this symbolic understanding. I agree that there is symbolism in baptism. Baptism is more than just a person going under water and emerging from the water. Baptism may be symbolically viewed as a “gospel” event. In Romans 6:3-4, the apostle Paul affirms that one’s baptism constitutes, in part, a re-enactment of the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ. In his book Theology for the Community of God, Stanley Grenz states, “[B]aptism is a visual word of proclamation” in that it “declares the death and resurrection of Christ on behalf of sinners. . . .” (523). Thus, the baptismal act is infused with symbolic significance because it brings into focus for the one being baptized and for those witnessing the baptism the redeeming work of Jesus Christ, which made salvation possible in the first place. In my mind, this constitutes the beauty of baptism, and it is certainly an aspect of baptism that needs to be included and emphasized in any discussion of it.

Nevertheless, Romans 6:1-6 also teaches that baptism is more than a sign. Indeed, Paul goes beyond the “sign” language and affirms that those who have participated in this act, such as the Roman Christians to whom he is writing, have actually participated in the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ. In participating in the so-called “drama of baptism,” the old man of sin is crucified and a new man is resurrected to “walk in newness of life” (vs. 4). For Paul, baptism is that moment when people who are dead in their trespasses are resurrected to a new life where Christ is their new master, the church is their new family, and heaven is their new destiny (cf. Col. 2:12-13; Eph. 2:4-5).

Closing it out...

This past weekend, Katie and I took 10 of our teenagers to Challenge Youth Conference (CYC) in Pigeon Forge, TN. This annual event has been taking place in east Tennessee since 2000 and is always one of the weekends that our teens look forward to the most. This year was no different, and it certainly did not disappoint!

Kyle Butt spoke and encouraged us to not trade something as valuable as our souls for anything the world has to offer. Ralph Gilmore made us think about things that could potentially be standing in the way of us serving the Lord as effectively as we can. David Shannon reminded us of the power of our words. Lonnie Jones fortified us, making us think about what we are will to stand out for and even be willing to die for. The lessons were fantastic, and our teenagers, along with around 13,000 other participants, are better for having been there to listen to them.

I am extremely proud of the behavior of our teens on the trip. Not one time was there a problem, and what's more, I didn't hear a single complaint the entire weekend! Isn't that awesome!?! If you have a child who was on this trip, let them know you are proud of them, because if our trip to CYC is any indication, they constantly give you reasons to be proud.

I am so thankful for PSYG! Our kids really are the cream of the crop, and they give me an enormous amount of hope for the present and future of the church here and wherever they go!

Until next time,

Jeremy
