VOLUME 29, NUMBER 39

September 27, 2018

Home Wreckers

The title of this article refers to those things that destroy a home, produce turmoil and heartbreak in a home, or prevent the home from being what it should be. I've got four to share with you.

Divorce annihilates a home. Many people, not just in the United States, view marriage as a consumer relationship rather than a covenant relationship. To be sure, God does not hate divorced people, but He does hate divorce (Mal. 2:16). Why does God hate divorce? When a divorce takes place, a covenant is broken, a separation akin to death takes place, vows are shattered, and a home, once sanctioned by God, is left desolate. If children are involved, they will usually feel the brunt of the divorce, and if someone doesn't step up or step in to help them, their lives can take a turn for the worse. A void, the force of a black hole, is often left in the hearts of those who go through a divorce. It's no wonder why God hates divorce. It's an awful reality that has destroyed one too many homes.

Despicable Spouses. It is almost impossible to determine the extent of spouse abuse, but the numbers are very high in the United States. Some husbands use their fists to whip their wives into line, and vice versa. Some wives use their tongues to belittle their husbands, and vice versa. I sometimes wonder if some couples should have made different vows at their wedding: "I, (Groom's name), take you, (Bride's name), to be my opponent in life, and my one true foe. I promise to make your life miserable, to hit you when I feel like, to curse you, and to make you feel uncomfortable. I promise to use you, abuse you, and make you feel like a nobody. I vow to be somewhere else when you need me, and I vow never to compromise when we are in an argument. I promise to be a millstone around your neck until death parts us." While no one in their right mind would ever make such promises at their wedding, some people probably should have—at least, then, they would not be guilty of breaking their vows.

Deadbeat Parents. It is truly a wonder why some couples ever decide to bring children into this world. Rather than viewing their children as gifts from God (Ps. 127:3), they view them as thorns in their sides. Some parents are indifferent to the needs of their children. Discipline is virtually nonexistent. These parents spend very little time with their children, and the time they do spend with them is a far cry from what we might call "QT." Other parents are frankly immoral. While they may spend a lot of time with their children, they do and say all sorts of things that a child should never have to see, hear, or experience in their homes. Their example is no less destructive than if they were never home. Still other parents are abusive. They are mean and cruel, and some are outright twisted. Such deadbeat parents would never be able to utter the words of Proverbs 1:8-9: "Hear, my son, your father's instruction, and forsake not your mother's teaching, for they are a graceful garland around your head and pendants for your neck."

Disobedient Children. While some people have the gall to argue that disobedience or insubordination in a child is entirely the parents' fault, such is not always the case. If disobedience in a child is exclusively the result of bad parenting, then explain the following command from the apostle Paul: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right" (Eph. 6:1). Why give such a command if a child is not responsible for his or her disobedience? Children have a responsibility and a duty to obey their parents as long as what they are being asked ordered to do is in keeping with God's will. There comes a point when children reach a certain level of maturity and development that they can begin to make their own decisions. They can choose to obey their parents, or they can choose to disobey their parents. Unfortunately, some children spurn their parents' instruction and discipline, and on some occasions such disobedience doesn't end well. I have personally seen the tears that a disobedient child brings to the eyes of a mother and a father. There are a host of children that need to wake up and see what they are doing to their respective families.

So, what is to account for the home crisis in our country and elsewhere? Why are such things taking place? We could name innumerable things, but generally speaking, the reason for the turmoil in many homes comes down to the simple fact that people have not been allowing God to be their home builder.

"Unless the Lord builds the house, those who build it labor in vain."

Closing it out...

In Luke 15:11-32, we find the so-called "Parable of the Prodigal Son." The son who chose to receive his portion of his father's inheritance was certainly prodigal. He wasted his money. We are told that he was reckless while doing so. This absolutely falls in line with the definition of "prodigal."

But, there is a positive side to the word "prodigal" as well, and this parable also shows that perhaps the most prodigal character is the father, who represents God the Father. God has something to offer, and he gives it in a lavish way.

In the story, the father gives his son his rightful share of the inheritance but at a time that wasn't right. It was normally reserved to be given at the time of the father's death. Drawing a comparison, God lavishly gave us His Son at a time when we did not deserve it. While we were sinners, Christ died for us (Rom. 5:8).

In the story, we also find the father giving his hired servants more than enough, showing his generosity.

Finally, despite the fact that the son had thrown away all that had already been given to him at a time that he shouldn't have even received it, the father doesn't just take him back in upon the repentant nature of the son's return. He isn't simply accepted. Rather, he is celebrated. Again, the father is over-the-top in how he gives. That is who our God is!

Isn't it great to serve such a prodigal God?!

Until next time...

Jeremy
