Four Signs of Spiritual Complacency

Amos was from the Southern Kingdom (i.e. Judah), but God sent him to the Northern Kingdom (i.e. Israel) to prophesy about the peoples' sins and impending judgment. Amos's prophecy occurred in the mid-700s BC. At this time, Israel was enjoying relative peace and prosperity. Some thirty or so years after Amos's prophecy, Israel would be carried away into an Assyrian captivity never to return. In Amos 6:1-7, we essentially find four signs of spiritual complacency that contributed to Israel's demise. Take the time to read these seven verses. What Amos said then serves as a warning to God's people now.

Overconfidence. Israel was "at ease in Zion" (Amos 6:1a). In vs. 7, we learn that their feelings of peace and satisfaction were ill-founded. Spiritual complacency often involves a higher view of self than what God determines to be true. There is a measure of self-deception and arrogance. Spiritually complacent people think they are doing okay spiritually when, in fact, they are not. They seem content with who they are and where they're at spiritually, despite the fact that there is still a long road in front of them on the way to spiritual maturity. They fail to realize, like the lukewarm folks in Laodicea, that they are "wretched, pitiable, poor, blind, and naked" (Rev. 3:17).

Self-Sufficiency. The people of Israel, not to mention the church at Laodicea, were enjoying an affluent and cozy lifestyle. Rather than seeing this as a blessing from God for which they should be thankful, the people began to trust in their own ability and strength. They felt secure (Amos 6:1b). Spiritual complacency and self-sufficiency are bedfellows. Spiritually complacent people tend to think that they can handle life on their own. Humble, prayerful dependence on God is virtually non-existent.

Indulgence. Spiritual complacency is really not a static phenomenon; it is usually regressive. Instead of progressing in holiness, there is a tendency to indulge in worldly pleasures (Amos 6:4-6a). One writer said, "Complacency creates discontentment for worldly pleasures and makes us content with spiritual things." Spiritually complacent people vigorously pursue and enjoy all the creature comforts they can, while remaining spiritually apathetic and lethargic. Indeed, spiritual complacency distorts our values. The story is told of some vandals that broke into a large department store and swapped the price-tags on various items. A $395 camera was priced at $39.95, while a $10 box of stationary was priced at $69.95! Spiritual complacency is like a vandal that creeps into our lives and changes the price-tags on our values.

Callousness. While enjoying themselves, Israel was not "grieved over the ruin of Joseph" (Amos 6:6b). Spiritual complacency also breeds a certain insensitivity or callousness. It ruins our compassion for people. It hardens our heart from thinking about the welfare of those around us. It prevents us from grieving over the pathetic conditions of others. It causes us to stay focused on ourselves and on our own personal happiness, comfort, and safety. When we are complacent, we lack generosity, hospitality, and sympathy.

Are you spiritually complacent? Have you become arrogant, independent, indulgent, and/or insensitive? If you have, all is not lost. In next week's article, we'll discuss four steps to preventing or overcoming spiritual complacency.
