Love Quotient

Our society places great value on knowledge. Almost all testing in our school systems from kindergarten through graduate school is knowledge-based. Such was true of my college career in earning an undergraduate and two graduate degrees. I was expected to retain, research, and regurgitate knowledge. I was expected to assess and apply data. Now, the retention and application of knowledge is undeniably important in nearly every profession and discipline, but is there something more important? As a society and even in the church, we stand in awe of people who can boast of high intelligence. We like high GPAs, high scores on the ACT or SAT, and high IQs. But is there something that we should emphasize more?

As far as God is concerned, there is something much more important than your IQ (Intellectual Quotient), and that's your LQ (Love Quotient). In 1 Corinthians 13:2, the apostle Paul puts this into perspective for us: "And if I have prophetic powers, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and if I have all faith, so as to remove mountains, but have not love, I am nothing" (ESV). Did you catch that? If you have managed to comprehend and retain all the knowledge in the world, but you do not have love, then you are nothing. God couldn't care less if you have a high IQ, if you don't have a high LQ. You can gain the world's respect for simply being smart, but you can't have God's favor on that basis alone.

Earlier in 1 Corinthians, Paul highlights one problem of having knowledge without love. In 1 Corinthians 8:1b, Paul writes, "Knowledge puffs up, but love edifies" (NKJV). This statement occurs in the midst of a discussion about meats offered to idols. There were two sharply contrasting positions. The self-defined strong had knowledge in that they knew an idol was nothing; thus, they ate the meat sacrificed to idols without a second thought. The weak, as defined by Paul, didn't understand, or lacked knowledge, that the idols were not real; thus, they generally didn't eat because such would, in their minds, contaminate them spiritually. In Paul's estimation, those who were "strong" should mix their knowledge with love and refrain from eating so as not to cause their weaker brethren to stumble. Knowledge is not inherently evil, but if you are so proud of your knowledge that it puffs you up and causes you to be indifferent about the spiritual welfare of your brothers and sisters in Christ, then God has a problem with you.

What do you think we value more in our churches: knowledge or love? What do you think we value more in our homes: knowledge or love? Do we praise our kids more for being smart or for showing love? Do we value what God values most? Do we emphasize what God emphasizes most? Knowing things is important, but showing love is more important.

SINCERITY

Is Not Enough

In a New York hospital several years ago, carbon dioxide instead of oxygen was mistakenly administered to a patient.

According to the police report, the patient died almost instantly. The unfortunate patient died in spite of his own sincerity and that of the hospital authorities, the anesthesiologist, and the surgeon.

In the same way, in religious things certainty must be coupled with sincerity. A person can be religiously honest and yet be in an extremely unsafe spiritual condition.

Saul of Tarsus was sincere during the time when the blood of Christians was dripping from his hands. After his conversion to Christ he said, "I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day" (Acts 23:1). "Indeed, I myself thought I must do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth" (Acts 26:9).

The plain teaching of the Book of God is "a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path" (Psalm 119:105). "There is a way that seems right to a man, but its end is the way of death" (Proverbs 14:12).

Make absolutely sure you are right, and then sincerely practice it.

Closing it out...

Have you ever wished that you knew what someone was thinking? Perhaps within a marriage, when your spouse isn't being completely honest about his or her feelings, it would be nice for you to know where he or she stands. (I've NEVER kept my true feelings from Katie, and I am certain none of you have done that to your spouse either...right? HA!)

Wish as we may, this is simply something that we cannot do. Sure, after years of getting to know people and learning how they respond to different things, we can develop a better idea of the thoughts of others that we know well. However, we can never fully know their thoughts.

Not so with Jesus. Not so with God. They know our hearts, minds, and thoughts! Consider the following verses, and look them up to see them in context:

Jeremiah 20:12 "O Lord of hosts...Who see the mind and the heart..."

Matthew 12:25 "And knowing their thoughts Jesus said to them..."

Luke 6:8 "But He knew what they were thinking..."

Luke 11:17 "But He knew their thoughts..."

Luke 16:15 "...but God knows your hearts..."

John 2:25 "...He did not need anyone to testify concerning man, for He Himself knew what was in man."

This is by no means an exhaustive list, but I believe it is sufficient to prove the point being made. While we can't always know the thoughts of another, our thoughts are known by God. Let's be careful what we think!
