Dissecting Our Adversary

If Jesus is my Lord, then Satan is my adversary. The converse is true as well. If Satan is my Lord, then Jesus is my adversary. Jesus and Satan are opposed to one another. If you stand with Jesus, you stand against Satan. If you stand with Satan, you stand against Jesus.

Satanas is the Greek transliteration of the Hebrew word sātān, meaning “adversary.” Diabolos is the Greek noun commonly translated “devil,” meaning “accuser” or “slanderer.” In the New Testament, Satan (34x) is a personal name for the archenemy of God and His people, while “the devil” (33x) is more like a title for this same diabolical being (cf. Matt. 4:1, 10).

As with Satan’s appearance or form (cf. 2 Cor. 11:14), Satan’s origin receives little to no attention in Scripture. Most Bible students have concluded that Satan was an angel whose prideful disposition led to his downfall (cf. 1 Tim. 3:6). One can demonstrate from Scripture that Satan does not possess the characteristics of deity. If Satan isn’t deity, then he must be a created being. As a created being, he must have been originally created as good, but he was evidently endowed with the ability to make decisions for good or evil. According to what we know about him from Scripture, he’s no longer good. We first meet him in Genesis 3 in the form of a serpent as he successfully drives a wedge between the first human couple and God (cf. John 8:44; 1 John 3:8; Rev. 12:9; 20:2). What he was before this time is difficult to establish. In light of 2 Peter 2:4 and Jude 6, he may have been involved in or even led a rebellion that left certain angels in chains, awaiting judgment. Without more information, it seems best to conclude that Satan was an angel.

Nevertheless, whatever one might conclude on the issue of Satan’s origin, it must be affirmed that Satan is a literal, evil being that belongs to the unseen realm. He is called the “ruler of this world” (John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11) and the “prince of the power in the air” (Eph. 2:2). Satan is an accuser (Gen. 3; Job. 1:6-11; 2:1-5; Zech. 3:1; Rev. 12:10), tempter (Matt. 4:1-11; 1 Cor. 7:5), and sinner (1 John 3:8). He employs a variety of tactics: doubt (Gen. 3:2); deception (Gen. 3:4-5; Luke 8:12; John 8:42-45; 2 Cor. 11:13-15; 2 Thess. 2:9-10; Rev. 12:9); division (Gen. 3:5; Job 1:9-10; 2:4-5; Rev. 2:10); distraction (Gen. 3:6; Matt. 4:1-11; 1 John 2:15-17); discouragement (1 Thess. 3:1-5; 1 Pet. 5:8-9; Rev. 2:10). Satan is not simply the personification of evil influences in the heart of a person; he is an unrelenting evil being who is bent on destroying our souls (Job 1:6; 2:2; 1 Pet. 5:8).

We must take Satan seriously. A growing number of folks are willing to accept the existence of God and heaven, but not Satan and hell. But the latter is just as real as the former. In next week’s article, we’ll discuss what we can do to defeat our adversary.

Closing it out...

The passage of time is often necessary for experiencing the full effect of a course of action. For example, if you begin taking a prescription medication, you may have to wait weeks or even months for it affect your system to its full potential. This can make pinpointing the most beneficial medication for you difficult, but when you are able to discover what that medication is, it makes the long process of elimination worth all the effort.

Depending on Bible version, James 1:2-4 tells us that the testing of our faith over time produces patience, endurance, perseverance, or steadfastness. James 1:4 (ESV) encourages us to allow "steadfastness" to have its full effect. Of course, steadfastness by its very definition requires us to remain faithful as we face life's various trials and temptations.

Are you allowing steadfastness to have its full effect? In the end, it will be worth it!

Until next time, Jeremy Gargis
