Hold Fast Hope

About four years ago, I wrote this little poem, and we published it on the front page of our bulletin. The poem was recently published in the Advocate. A few of our members have suggested that we publish it in our bulletin a second time, since it speaks in many ways to our current crisis. So, here it is again. Be sure to read the passages listed below it.

When the diagnosis is heartbreaking and scary
When a loved one has just drawn the last breath
When there's too much to carry
When the pink slip is pushed across the desk
When the news is worse than expected
When everything seems rushed
When the prognosis can't be accepted
When your spirit is crushed
When your friend becomes the betrayer
When society mocks your zeal
When the pain stifles your prayer
When your wounds won't heal
When your family forsakes you
When you can't reach the top
When the answers are few
When your tears won't stop
When your choice was the wrong one
When you don't know how to cope
When you let down the Son
Christian, hold fast hope.

See Hebrews 3:1-19; 4:14-16; 10:19-25, 32-39.
