A Perilous Precipice

In Into Thin Air, John Krakauer tells of his harrowing experience climbing Mt. Everest. On May 10, 1996, Krakauer made it to the top. He paused only for a few minutes before heading down, his muscles exhausted, his limbs frozen, and his brain deprived of oxygen. As he descended, some clouds drifted up and enveloped him. Soon, thunder, lightning, and a snowstorm threatened to disorient him, but he was close enough to one of the base camps to get to the sheltering tents before the full force of the storm hit.

A group of four climbers arrived at the summit shortly before Jon, but they stayed longer than he did. They did not have time to get to the camp before darkness. The storm caused them to lose their way. Exhausted and lost, they decided to hunker down and wait out the night. When they awoke in the morning, they found they had lain down just one step from the 4,000-foot precipice of the South Wall. They had slept the night on the edge of a cliff in the middle of a snowstorm.

Like that snowstorm on Mt. Everest, our culture can disorient us with the winds of relativism, the icy cold of indifference, and the darkness of unbelief. Many people are teetering on spiritual disaster, and they don't even know it. But there's hope for them. There's a light, and those of us who follow Christ have a responsibility to point people to Christ, who is the light (John 1:4-5; 8:12; 12:46). He reveals our position and points the way to safety.

thank you

To my Christian family at Pulaski Street,

Thank you for always being there for me and for being there for me now as I have this battle with cancer. Thank you for the calls, cards, and prayers for me. I pray God will continue to bless Pulaski Street.

In Christian love,
Randy Britton

I just wanted to thank everyone for the prayers, thoughts, and cards as I recover from my heart surgery.

Thanks so much.
Danny Gray

Ryan Gallagher will be joining us for a few sessions on “Jesus: the Lion and the Lamb.”

Closing it out:

At our Breakfast Bible Study this past Monday, we looked at Psalm 11; it is my favorite of the psalms. It’s my favorite because of the hope its words give to me, and it is also meaningful to me for sentimental reasons.

In Psalm 11, we find that instead of focusing on the perils of life, David finds a way to shift his focus to God, who is the sovereign ruler. It is a beautiful concept that He always rules and that nothing is outside of His knowledge. He loves righteous deeds, and those who practice them will one day see His face!

Don’t get bogged down by the immediate dangers of life; remember that God is still God despite them!

Until next time,

Jeremy Gargis
