A Victorious Crucifixion

Jesus' crucifixion at Golgotha presents us with a plethora of paradoxes. The cross was an instrument of death, but it gave life. Jesus' crucifixion was premeditated murder, but it was also a predestined sacrifice. It was a great act of sin on the part of the Jews and Romans, but it was also a great cure for sin. Jesus' crucifixion simultaneously demonstrated both God's wrath (i.e., how much God hates sin) and God's mercy (i.e., how much God loves the sinner). On the cross, Jesus won by losing, triumphed by surrendering, and conquered by dying.

At the Place of the Skull, Jesus crushed the head of that old serpent (Gen. 3:15). Indeed, it was at the cross that the ruler of this world, Satan, was cast out (John 12:31). It was in Jesus' crucifixion that the devil, who has the power of death, was decimated, resulting in the deliverance of "all those who through fear of death were subject to lifelong slavery" (Heb. 2:15).

At Golgotha, Jesus demonstrated an excruciating grace, redeeming us through his blood and making the forgiveness of our sins possible (Eph. 1:7). As a result of Jesus' solitary, perfect, and unrepeatable sacrifice, Jesus is able to save us to the uttermost (Heb. 7:23) and secure for us an eternal redemption (Heb. 9:12).

At the time of Jesus' crucifixion, the enemies of Christ must have had a very decided view of what was taking place. To them the death of Christ meant the execution of a blasphemer or insurrectionist, the eradication of a false teaching, and in some measure the extinguishment of a dangerous movement. But they were wrong on all counts. They were actually witnessing the victory of God over sin and death.

Yes, what transpired at Golgotha nearly 2,000 years ago was a tragedy, but it was also a triumph. Golgotha, a place once associated exclusively with death and condemnation, has become a place that millions now associate with life and salvation, especially when they consider that "in the place where he was crucified there was a garden, and in the garden a new tomb in which no one had been laid" (John 19:41).
